phase (fāz), phasis [late L. and Gr. phasis, from the stem pha-, to shine], n. (pl. -ses) A particular aspect or appearance; the form under which anything presents itself to the mind; a stage of change or development; (Astron.) a particular aspect of the illuminated surface of the moon or a planet; applied esp. to the successive quarters etc. of the moon; (Elect.) the relationship in time between the peaks of two alternating voltages, etc. See SINGLE-PHASE, THREE-PHASE. phasic (fā' sik), a. phaseless (fāz' lès), a.

phasma (făz' mà) [L. and Gr., a spectre, as prec.], n. (pl. phasmata) (Zool.) A genus of orthopterous insects comprising the walking-leaves etc.

pheasant (fez' ánt) [A.-F. fesant (F. faisan), L. phāsiānus, Gr. Phasianos, of or pertaining to the Phasis, a river of Colchis], n. A game bird, Phasianus Colchicus, naturalized in Britain and Europe, noted for its brilliant plumage and its delicate flesh. pheasantry, n.

pheeze (fēz) [A.-S. fēsian (cp. Norw. föysa, Swed. fösa)], v.t. To do for; to beat, to drive off. v.i. (Am.) To fret, to be uneasy. n. A state of fretfulness.

phello- [Gr. phellos, cork], comb. form. phelloderm (fel' ó dĕrm) [DERM], n. (Bot.) A layer of parenchymatous tissue containing chlorophyll, and sometimes formed on the inner side of a layer of phellogen. phellodermal (-dĕr' mál), a. phellogen (fel' ó jen), n. The layer of meristematic cells from which the cork-tissue is formed, cork-tissue. phellogenetic (-jé net' ik), phellogenic (-jĕn' ik), a. phelloplastic (-plăs' tik), n. A figure carved or modelled in cork; (pl.) the art of making such figures.

phen- pheno- [Gr. phainos, shining, from phainein, show], comb. form. (Chem.) Applied to substances derived from coal-tar, orig. in the production of coal-gas for illuminating. phenacetin (fē nās' i tin), n. A white crystalline compound used as an antipyretic.

phenakistoscope (fen á kis' tó skōp) [Gr. phhenakistēs, an impostor, from phenakizein, to cheat, -SCOPE], n. A scientific toy in which a disk bearing figures in successive attitudes of motion is rapidly revolved so as to convey to the observer, by means of a mirror or a series of slits, the impression of continuous movement.

phenix [PHŒNIX].

phenogamic, etc. [PHENEROGAMIC].

phenol (fē' nól) [PHEN-, -OL], n. (Chem.) Carbolic acid.

phenology (fé nol' ó ji) [contr. of PHENOMENOLOGY, after G. phänologisch], n. The study of the times of recurrence of natural phenomena, esp. of the influence of climate on plants and animals. phenological (-loj' i kál), a.

phenomenon (fé nom' é nón) [L. phænomenon, Gr. phainomenon, neut. p.p. of phainein, to show], n. (pl. -ena) That which appears or is perceived by observation or experiment, esp. a thing or occurrence the law or agency causing which is in question; (colloq.) a remarkable or unusual appearance; (Phil.) that which is apprehended by the mind, as distinguished from real existence. phenomenal, a. Of or pertaining to phenomena, esp. as distinguished from underlying realities or causes; of the nature of a phenomenon, perceptible, cognizable by the senses; (colloq.) extraordinary, prodigious. phenomenally, adv. phenomenalism, -enism, n. The doctrine that phenomena are the sole material of knowledge, and that underlying realities and causes are unknowable. phenomenalist, -enist, n. phenomenalistic, -enistic (-nis' tik), a. phenomenalize, v.t. To treat or conceive as phenomenal. phenomenize, v.t. To make phenomenal; to phenomenalize. phenomenology (-nol' ó ji), n. The science of phenomena, opp. to ontology; the division of any inductive science treating of the phenomena forming its basis. phenomenological (-loj' i kál), a. phenomenologically, adv.

phenyl (fen' il) [PHEN-, -YL], n. (Chem.) The organic radical found in benzene, phenol, aniline, etc.

pheon (fē' òn) [etym. doubtful], n. (Her.) The barbed head of a dart, arrow, or javelin, a broad arrow.

phew (fū) [instinctive sound], int. Expressing surprise, disgust, impatience, etc.

phial (fī' ál) [M.E. and O.F. fiole, L. phiala, Gr. phialē], n. A small glass vessel or bottle esp. for medicine. v.t. To put or keep in or as in a phial.

Phi Beta Kappa (fī bē' tá kăp' á) [initials of Gr. Philosophia Biou Kubernetes, Philosophy is the guide of life], n. The oldest of the American college fraternities.

phil- [PHILO-], comb. form. -phil [-PHILE], suf.

philander (fi lăn' dèr) [Gr. philandros (PHIL-, anēr andros, man, perh. after a character in Beaumont & Fletcher's 'Laws of Candy,' or from a lover in Ariosto's 'Orlando Furioso')], v.i. To make love in a trifling or sentimental way; to flirt (with or after). philanderer, n.

philanthropy (fi lăn' thró pi) [late L. and Gr. philanthrōpia (PHIL-, anthrōpos, man)], n. Love of mankind; active benevolence towards one's fellow-men. philanthrope (fil' án thrōp), n. philanthropic, -al (fil án throp' ik, -ál), a. philanthropically, adv. philanthropist (-lăn' thró pist), n. philanthropism, n. philanthropize, v.t. and i.

philately (fi lăt' é li) [F. philatélie (PHIL-, Gr. ateleia, freedom from toll, from a-, not, telos, toll, tax)], n. The collecting of postage stamps. philatelic (-tel' ik), a. philatelist (-lăt' é list), n. philatelistic (-lis' tik), a.

-phile [Gr. philos, loving, dear, friendly, from philein, to love], suf. A lover or friend of; loving; as in bibliophile, gastrophile, Germanophile.

philharmonic (fil hár mon' ik) [F. philharmonique (PHIL-, HARMONIC)], a. Loving music. n. A person fond of music; (ellipt.) a musical society.

Philhellene (fil' hé lēn) [PHIL-, HELLENE], n. A friend or lover of the Greeks or a supporter of Greek independence. a. Friendly to Greece or supporting Greek independence. Philhellenic (-lē' nik, -len' ik), a. Philhellenism (-hel' é nizm), n. Philhellenist, n.

philibeg [FILIBEG].

philippic (fi lip' ik) [L. Philippicus, Gr. philippikos, from Philippos, Philip], n. One of three orations of Demosthenes against Philip of Macedon; applied also to Cicero's orations against Antony; any speech or declamation full of acrimonious invective. philippize (fil' i pīz), v.i. To take the part of Philip of Macedon; hence, to act or speak as if under corrupt influence; (erron.) to write or deliver a philippic.

philosopher (fi los' ō fĕr) [F. philosophre, philosophe, L. philosophus, Gr. philosophos (PHILO-, sophos, wise)], n. A lover of wisdom; one who studies or devotes himself to natural or moral philosophy or to the investigation of the principles of being or of knowledge; one who regulates his conduct and actions by the principles of philosophy; one of philosophic temper. philosophers' stone: An imaginary stone, sought for by the alchemists in the belief that it would transmute the baser metals into gold or silver. philosophe (fil' ō sof), n. A philosophist or pretender to philosophy; *a philosopher. philosophic, -al (-sof' ik, -ăl), a. Pertaining or according to philosophy; devoted to or skilled in philosophy; wise, calm, temperate, unimpassioned. philosophically, adv. philosophism (fi los' ō fizm), n. Affectation of philosophy (applied esp. to the French Encyclopædists); sophistry. philosophist, n. philosophistic, philosophistical (-fis' tik, -ăl), a. philosophize, v.t. and i. philosophizer, n. philosophy, n. Love of wisdom; the knowledge or investigation of ultimate reality or of general principles of knowledge or existence; a particular system of philosophic principles; the fundamental principles of a science etc.; practical wisdom; calmness and coolness of temper; serenity, resignation; *reasoning, argumentation. natural philosophy: The study of natural phenomena, science. moral philosophy: Ethics.

philotechnic, -al (fil ō tek' nik, -ăl) [Gr. philotechnos (PHILO-, technē, art)], a. Fond of the arts, esp. the industrial arts.

philozoic (-zō' ik) [Gr. zōon, animal], a. Fond of or kind to animals. philozoist, n.

-philous [Gr. philos, loving (PHILE-, -OUS)], suf. As in anemophilous.

philtre (fil' tĕr) [F., from L. philtrum, Gr. philtron, from philein, to love], n. A love-potion, a love-charm. v.t. To charm or excite with a love-potion.

phimosis (fi mō' sis) [Gr., from phimoein, to muzzle], n. (Path.) Constriction of the opening of the prepuce. phimosed, a.

phiz (fiz) [short for obs. phisnomy, PHYSIOGNOMY], n. (slang) The face, the visage; the expression, the countenance.

phlebitis (flē bī' tis) [Gr. phleps phlebos, vein, -ITIS], n. (Path.) Inflammation of the inner membrane of a vein. phlebitic (-bit' ik), a.

phlebolite, -lith (fleb' ō lit, -lith) [as prec., -ITE], n. A calculus in a vein. phlebolitic (-lit' ik), -lithic (-lith' ik), a.

phlebology (flē bol' ō ji) [as foll., -LOGY], n. The department of physiology or anatomy dealing with the veins; a treatise on the veins.

phlebotomy (flē bot' ō mi) [O.F. flebothomie (F. phlébotomie), L. and Gr. phlebotomia (phleps phlebos, vein, -TOMY)], n. (Surg.) The opening of a vein, blood-letting. phlebotomist, n. phlebotomize, v.t. To let blood from; v.i. To practise phlebotomy.

phlegm (flem) [M.E. and O.F. fleume (F. phlegme), L. and G. phlegma -matos, from phlegein, to burn], n. Viscid mucus secreted in the air passages or stomach, esp. as a morbid product and discharged by coughing etc.; *self-possession; watery matter forming one of the four humours of the body; (fig.) coolness, sluggishness, apathy. phlegmagogue (fleg' mă gog), n. (Med.) A medicine for expelling phlegm, an expectorant. phlegmagogic (-goj' ik), a. and n. phlegmasia (-mā' si ă, -zi ă), n. (Path.) Inflammation, esp. with fever. phlegmatic, -al (fleg măt' ik, -ăl), a. phlegmatically, adv. phlegmy (flem' i), a. Abounding in or of the nature of phlegm.

phlegmon (fleg' mŏn) [M.E. flegmon, L. phlegmon -mona, Gr. phlegmonē, as prec.], n. (Path.) A tumour or inflammation of the cellular tissue. phlegmonic (-mon' ik), phlegmonous (fleg' mŏ nŭs), a.

phloem (flō' ĕm) [Gr. phloos, bark], n. (Bot.) The softer cellular portion of fibro-vascular tissue, the bark and the tissues closely connected with it.

phlogiston (flŏ jis'-, -gis' tŏn) [Gr., neut. of phlogistos, burnt up, from phlogizein, to set on fire, cogn. with phlegein, to burn], n. The principle of inflammability formerly supposed to be a necessary constituent of combustible bodies. phlogistic (-jis'-, -gis' tik), a. and n. phlogisticate, v.t. phlogosis (-gō' sis), n. (Path.) Inflammation.

phlorizin (flō rī' zin, flor' i zin) [Gr. phloos, bark, rhiza, root], n. (Chem.) A bitter substance found in the root-bark of the apple, pear, and other trees.

phlox (floks) [Gr., flame, name of a plant], n. A genus of North American plants of the family Polemoniaceæ, with clusters of showy flowers.

phlyctæna (flik tē' nà) [Gr. phluktaina, from phluein, to swell], n. (Path.) A vesicle, pimple, or blister, esp. on the eye-ball. phlyctenar, -tenous, -tenoid, a.

phobe [F., from L. and Gr. -phobos, from phobos, fear], suf. Fearing; as in Anglophobe, Gallophobe. -phobia, suf. Fear, morbid dislike; as in Anglophobia, hydrophobia.

phoca (fō' kà) [L., from Gr. phokē, seal], n. (Zool.) A seal; a genus of pinniped mammals containing the true seals. phocacean (fō kā' sē ăn), a. and n. phocaceous, phocal (fō' kàl), phocine (fō' sīn), a.

Phœbus (fē' bùs) [L., from Gr. phoibos bright, shining], n. (Gr. Myth.) Apollo as the sun-god; the sun.

Phœnician (fē nish' ăn) [F. phénicien (L. Phœnicia, Gr. phoinikē, -AN)], a. Of or pertaining to Phœnicia, an ancient Semitic country on the coast of Syria, or to its colonies, Punic, Carthaginian. n. A native or inhabitant of Phœnicia or its colonies.

phœnix (fē' nīks) [L., from Gr. phoinix, phœnix, also purple, Carthaginian], n. A fabulous Arabian bird, the only one of its kind, said to live for five or six hundred years in the desert and to immolate itself on a funeral pyre, whence it rose again in renewed youth; (fig.) a person or thing of extreme rarity or excellence, a paragon.

pholas (fō' lăs) [Gr.], n. (pl. -lades, -lā dēz). A genus of stone-boring bivalves, a piddock. pholad, n. pholadean (-lăd' ē ăn), pholadid (fō' là did), n. pholadoid, a.

phon (fŏn) [Gr. phonē, voice], n. (Acous.) The unit of loudness. phonometer, n. Instrument for estimating loudness of sound.

phon-, phono- [Gr. phōnē, sound], comb. form. Pertaining to sound or sounds. phonate (fō' nāt), v.i. To make a vocal sound; v.t. To utter vocally. phonation (fō nā' shùn), n. phonatory (fō' nà tŏr i), a. phonautograph (fō naw' tō grăf) [AUTO-, -GRAPH], n. An apparatus for recording the vibrations of sounds. phonautographic (-grăf' ik), a. phonautographically, adv.

phone (1) (fōn) [short for TELEPHONE], v.t. and i. To telephone. n. The telephone.

phone (2) (fōn) [Gr. phōnē, voice], n. An articulate sound, as a simple vowel or consonant sound.

phone [Gr. phōnē, sound, voice], suf. As in dictaphone, telephone.

phonendoscope (fō nen' dō skōp) [PHON-, Gr. endon, within, -SCOPE], n. A variety of stethoscope for enabling small sounds, esp. within the human body, to be distinctly heard.

phonetic (fō net' ik) [Gr. phōnētikos, from phōnein, to speak, from phōnē, voice, sound], a. Pertaining to the voice or vocal sounds; representing sounds, esp. by means of a distinct letter or character for each. n.pl. The science of articulate sounds, phonology. phonetically, adv. phonetician (-tish' ăn), phoneticism (-net'-), n. Phonetic writing, phonetic representation of language. phoneticist, n. phoneticize, v.t. phonetist (fō' nē tist), n. One versed in phonetics, a phonologist; an advocate of phonetic writing, a phoneticist. phonic (fō' nik, fon' ik), a. Pertaining to sounds, acoustic; pertaining to vocal sounds. phonics, n. Phonetics; acoustics.

phoney (fō' ni) [etym. doubtful], a. (Am. slang) Bogus, false.

phonogram (fō' nō grăm) [PHONO-, -GRAM], n. A written character indicating a particular spoken sound, as in Pitman's system of phonography; a sound-record made by a phonograph.

phonograph (fō' nō grăf) [PHONO-, -GRAPH], n. An instrument for automatically recording and reproducing sounds; (Am.) a gramophone; *a phonogram; *a phonautograph. v.t. To record by means of phonography; to reproduce by means of a phonograph.

phonography (fō nog' rà fi) [PHONO-, -GRAPHY], n. A system of shorthand invented by Isaac Pitman (1813–97), in which each sound is represented by a distinct character; automatic recording and reproduction of sounds, as by the phonograph; the art of using the phonograph. phonographer, phonographist, n. One skilled in phonography. phonographic (-grăf' ik), a. phonographically, adv.

phonolite (fō' nō līt) [PHONO-, -LITE], n. (Min.) Clinkstone.

phonology (fō nol' ō ji) [PHONO-, -LOGY], n. The science of the vocal sounds; the sounds and combinations of sounds in a particular language. phonologic, -al (-loj' ik, -ăl), a. phonologist, -ger (-nol' ō jist, -jèr), n. phonometer (fō nom' ē tèr) [-METER], n. An instrument for recording the number and intensity of vibrations, esp. of sound-waves. phonopore (fō' nō pōr) [Gr. poros, passage], n. A device attached to a telegraph wire for allowing telephonic messages to be sent over the line at the same time as telegraphic messages, without interference from the current transmitting the latter. phonoperic (-por' ik), a. phonoscope (fō' nō skōp) [-SCOPE], n. An instrument for testing the quality of musical strings; an instrument of various kinds for translating sound vibrations into visible figures; a phenakistoscope representing a person speaking. phonotype (fō' nō tīp) [TYPE], n. A character used in phonetic printing. phonotypic, -al (-tip' ik, -ăl), a. phonotyper, -pist (fō' nō tī pĕr, -pist), n. phonotypy, n. Phonetic printing.

-phore [F., from Gr. phoros, bearing, from pherein, to bear], suf. Bearer; as in

phosgene (fos' jēn) [F. phosgène (Gr. phōs, light, -GEN)], n. (Chem.) Gaseous carbon oxychloride, used as a poison gas. phosgenite, n. (Min.) A mineral consisting of carbonate and chloride of lead in nearly equal proportions.

phosphate (fos' fāt) [PHOSPH-, -ATE], n. (Chem.) A salt of phosphoric acid; (pl.) phosphates of calcium, iron, and alumina, etc., used as fertilizing agents. phosphatic (-făt' ik), a.

phosphene (fos' fēn) [Gr. phōs, light, phainein, to show], n. A luminous image produced by pressure on the eyeball, caused by irritation of the retina.

phosphide (fos' fīd) [PHOSPH-, -IDE], n. (Chem.) A combination of phosphorus with another element or radical. phosphite, n. A salt of phosphorous acid.

phosphor (fos' fôr) [L., PHOSPHORUS], n. The morning-star, Lucifer; phosphorus. phosphor-bronze, -copper, -tin, etc., n. A combination of phosphorus with the metal named.

phosphorate (fos' fō rāt) [PHOSPHORUS, -ATE], v.i. (Chem.) To combine or impregnate with phosphorus.

phosphoresce (fos fō res') [as prec., -ESCE], v.i. To give out a light unaccompanied by perceptible heat or without combustion. phosphorescence, n. The emission of or the property of emitting light under such conditions. phosphorescent, a.

phosphoric (fos for' ik) [as foll., -IC], a. (Chem.) Pertaining to phosphorus in its higher valency; phosphorescent. phosphorism, n. Phosphorus necrosis [see PHOSPHORUS]. phosphorite (fos' fō rīt), n. (Min.) A massive variety of phosphate of lime. phosphoro-, comb. form. phosphorogenic (-jen' ik), a. Causing phosphorescence. phosphorograph (fos' fôr ō grăf), n. A luminous image produced on a phosphorescent surface. phosphorographic (-grăf' ik), a. phosphorography (-rog' rā fi), n. phosphoroscope (fos' fôr ō skōp), n. An apparatus for measuring the duration of phosphorescence. phosphorous, a. Pertaining to, of the nature of, or obtained from phosphorus, esp. in its lower valency.

phosphorus (fos' fō rŭs) [L., the morning-star, from Gr. phosphoros (phōs, light, -phoros, bringing, from pherein, to bear)], n. A yellowish non-metallic element, combustible at a low temperature and consequently luminous in the dark. phosphorus necrosis: Gangrene of the jaw caused by the fumes of phosphorus, esp. in the manufacture of matches. phosphuret [PHOSPHIDE]. phosphuretted, a. phossy jaw: (colloq.) Phosphorus necrosis.

photism (fō' tizm) [Gr. photismos, from photizein, to shine, from phōs phōtos, light], n. An hallucinatory sensation of colour accompanying some other sensation.

photomechanical (fō tō mē kăn' i [PHOTO-, MECHANICAL], a. Of or pertaining to a process by which photographic images are reproduced or employed in printing by mechanical means. photometer (fō tom' ē tĕr) [-METER], n. A contrivance for mea-the relative intensity of light. photometric, -al (-met′ rik, -ăl), a. photometry (-tom′ ĕ tri), n. photomicrography (-krog′ rà fi), n. The process of making magnified photographs of microscopic objects. photomicrograph (-mī krō grăf), n. photo-micrographer (-krog′ rà fĕr), n. photomicrographic (-grăf′ ik), a. photon (fō′ ton), n. (Phys.) Unit of light intensity; quantum of radiant energy. photophobia (fō tō fō′ bi à) [-PHOBIA], n. (Path.) Morbid shrinking from or intolerance of light. photophobic (-fob′ ik), a. photophone (fō′ tō fōn) [-PHONE], n. An instrument for transmitting sounds by the agency of light. photoprocess (-prō′ ses), n. Any photomechanical process. photopsia (fō top′ si à), photopsy (fō′ top si), n. (Path.) An affection of the eye causing the patient to see lines, flashes of light, etc. photorelief (-rē lēf′), n. An image in relief produced by a photographic process; a. Pertaining to any process of producing such reliefs. photo-sensitive, a. The property of being sensitive to the action of light. photosphere (fō′ tō sfĕr), n. The luminous envelope of the sun or a star. photospheric (-sfer′ ik), a. photostat (fō tō stăt), n. Protected trade name of a camera to photograph prints, documents, etc.; a photograph so produced. photosynthesis (fō tō sin′ thĕ sis) [-SYNTHESIS], n. (Biol.) The process by which carbohydrates are produced from carbon dioxide and water through the agency of light. photosynthetic (-thet′ ik), a. photosynthetically, adv. phototherapy (fō tō ther′ à pi) [-THERAPY], n. The treatment of skin-diseases by means of certain kinds of light-rays.

phrase (frāz) [F., from L. and Gr. phrasis, from phrazein, to speak], n. An expression denoting a single idea or forming a distinct part of a sentence; a brief or concise expression; mode, manner or style of expression, diction; idiomatic expression; a small group of words equivalent grammatically to a single word, esp. to an adjective, adverb, or noun; (pl.) mere words; (Mus.) a short, distinct passage forming part of a melody. v.t. To express in words or phrases. phrase-book, n. A handbook of phrases or idioms in a language. phrase-monger, n. One who uses mere phrases; one addicted to magniloquent phrases. phrasal, a. phraseless, a. Indescribable. phraseogram, phraseograph, n. A character standing for a whole phrase, as in phonography. phraseology (-ē ol′ ò ji), n. Choice or arrangement of words; manner of expression, diction; *a phrase-book. phraseological (-loj′ i kăl), a. phraseologically, adv. phraseologist (-ol′ ò jist), n. phraser, n. phrasing, n.

phratry (frā′ tri) [F. phratrie, Gr. phratria, from phratēr, a clansman, cogn. with L. frāter, Eng. BROTHER], n. (Gr. Ant.) A division of the people for political or religious purposes; (Athens) one of the three subdivisions of a tribe; any tribal subdivision among primitive races. phratric, a.

phrenetic (frē net′ ik) [M.E. and O.F. frenetike, L. phrenēticus, Gr. phrenētikos, phrenītikos, from phrenītis, delirium (phrēn phrenos, diaphragm, mind, -ITIS)], a. Frenzied, frantic, fanatical. n. A frantic or frenzied person. phrenic (fren′ ik), a. (Anat.) Of or pertaining to the diaphragm; n. The phrenic nerve; *(pl.) psychology. phrenitis (frē nī′ tis), n. (Path.) Inflammation of the brain or its membranes, attended with delirium; brain-fever. phrenitic (-nit′ ik), a. phrenograph (fren′ ò grăf), n. An instrument for registering the movements of a diaphragm in breathing; a phrenological chart of a person's mental characteristics. phrenography (-nog′ rà fi), n. The description of phenomena as the first stage in comparative psychology.

phrenology (frē nol′ ò ji) [Gr. phrēn phrenos, see prec., -LOGY], n. The theory that the mental faculties and affections are located in distinct parts of the brain denoted by prominences on the skull. phrenological (-loj′ i kăl), a. phrenologically, adv. phrenologist (-nol′ ò jist), n.

phrontistery (fron′ tis tĕr i) [Gr. phrontistērion, from phrontizein, to think, from phrontis, thought], n. A place for thought or study, a thinking-shop.

Phrygian (frij′ i ăn) [L. Phrygiānus], a. Pertaining to Phrygia, an ancient country in Asia Minor. n. A native or inhabitant of Phrygia. Phrygian cap: A conical cap worn by the ancient Phrygians, since adopted as an emblem of liberty. Phrygian mode: (Mus.) One of the four ancient Greek modes, having a warlike character.

phthalic (thăl′ ik) [short for NAPHTHALIC], a. (Chem.) Of, pertaining to, or derived from naphthalene. phthalein (thăl′ ē in), n. One of a series of organic compounds, largely used for dyeing, produced by the combination of phthalic anhydride with the phenols. phthalin, n. A colourless crystalline substance obtained from phthalein.

phthiriasis (thī ri ā′ sis) [L., from Gr. phtheiriasis, from phtheirian, to be lousy], n. (Path.) A morbid condition in which lice multiply on the skin.

phycology (fī kol′ ò ji) [Gr. phucos, seaweed, -LOGY], n. The botany of seaweeds or algæ. phycologist, n. phycography, n. Descriptive phycology phylactery (fi lăk′ tĕr i) [L. phylactērium, Gr. phulaktērion, from phulaktēr, a guard, from phulassein, to guard], n. A charm, spell, or amulet worn as a preservative against disease or danger; a small leather box in which are enclosed slips of vellum inscribed with passages from the Pentateuch, worn on the head and left arm by Jews during morning prayer, except on the Sabbath. phylacteried, a. phylacteric (-ter' ik), a.

phylarch (fī' lark) [L. phylarchus, Gr. phularchos (phulē, tribe, archein, to rule)], n. The chief or commander of a tribe or clan, esp. in ancient Greece. phylarchic, -al (-lar' kik, -ăl), a. phylarchy (fī' lar ki), n.

phyletic (fī let' ik) [Gr. phuletikos, from phuletēs, tribesman, as prec.], a. (Biol.) Pertaining to a phylum, racial.

-phyll [Gr. phullon], suf. Leaf; as in chlorophyll, xanthophyll.

phyllite (fil' īt) [Gr. phullon, leaf, -ITE], n. (Min.) An argillaceous schist or slate.

phyllo- [Gr. phullon, leaf], comb. form. phyllobranchia (fil ō brăng' ki ă) [Gr. branchia, gills], n. (pl. -chiæ) (Zool.) A gill of a leaf-like or lamellar structure, as in certain crustaceans.

phyllode (fil' ōd), phyllodium (fi lō' di ŭm) [F. phyllode, mod. L. phyllōdium, from Gr. phyllōdēs (phullon, leaf, -ODE)], n. (pl. -odes, -odia) (Bot.) A petiole having the appearance and functions of a leaf. phylloid, a. phyllome, n. A leaf or organ analogous to a leaf; foliage. phyllomic (-lō' mik), n.

phyllomania (fil ō mā' ni ă) [PHYLLO-, -MANIA], n. (Bot.) Abnormal production of leaves. phyllophagan (-lof' ă găn) [Gr. phagein, to eat], n. (Zool.) An animal feeding on leaves, as a group of lamellicorn beetles including the chafers, or one of the Phyllophaga, a group of hymenoptera containing the sawflies. phyllophagous, a. phyllophorous (-lof' ō rŭs), a. Leaf-bearing. phyllopod (fil' ō pod) [Gr. pous podos, foot], n. Any individual of the Phyllopoda, a group of entomostracous crustacea with never less than four pairs of leaf-like feet. phyllopodous (-lop' ō dŭs), a. phyllopodiform (-pod' i fôrm), a. phyllorhine (fil' ō rīn) [Gr. rhis rhīnos, nose], a. Having a leaf-like appendage to the nose; n. A leaf-nosed bat. phyllostome (fil' ō stōm) [Gr. stoma -mata, mouth], n. A bat of the genus Phyllostoma, characterized by a nose-leaf. phyllostomatous (-stom' ă tŭs), phyllostomine, -moid, -mous (fi los' tō mīn, -moid, -mŭs), a. phyllotaxis (fil ō tăk' sis) [Gr. taxis, from tassein, to arrange], n. (Bot.) The arrangement of the leaves etc. on the stem or axis of a plant. phylloxera (fil ŏk sēr' ă) [Gr. xēros, dry], n. (Ent.) An aphid or plant-louse, orig. from America, very destructive to grape-vines.

phylo- [Gr. phūlon, phulē, tribe], comb. form. phylogeny (phi loj' ē ni), phylogenesis (phi lō jen' ē sis) [GENESIS], n. (Biol.) The evolution of a group, species, or type of plant or animal life; the history of this. phylogenetic, -al (-jē net' ik, -ăl), philogenic (-jen' ik), a. phylum (fī' lŭm), n. (pl. -la) (Biol.) A primary group consisting of related organisms descended from a common form.

phyma (fī' mă) [L., from Gr. phūma -ata], n. (pl. -ata) (Path.) An external tubercle or imperfectly suppurating tumour.

physalite (fī' să līt) [G. phusalith, pyrophysalith, PYROPHYSALITE], n. (Min.) A greenish-white variety of topaz.

physeter (fī sē' tėr) [L., from Gr. phūsētēr, a blower, a whale, from phūsan, to blow], n. (Zool.) A genus of cetacea, containing the sperm-whales; a filter working by air-pressure.

physic (fiz' ik) [M.E. fisike, O.F. fisique, L. physica, Gr. phusikē, of nature, from phusis, nature, from phuein, to produce], n. The science or art of healing; the medical profession; medicine, esp. a purge or cathartic; *a physician; (pl.) the group of sciences dealing with the phenomena of matter, esp. as affected by energy, and the laws governing these, excluding biology and chemistry. v.t. (past and p.p. physicked) To administer physic to, to dose; to purge. physical, a. Of or pertaining to matter; obvious to or cognizable by the senses; pertaining to physics, esp. as opposed to chemical; material, bodily, corporeal, as opposed to spiritual; medicinal; *curative; *purgative. physically, adv. physician (fi zish' ăn), n. One versed in or practising the art of healing, including medicine and surgery; a legally qualified practitioner who prescribes remedies for diseases; (fig.) a healer; *a physicist. physicist, n. One versed in physics; a natural philosopher; (Biol.) one who believes in the physical and chemical origin of vital phenomena, opposed to vitalist. physicism, n. physicky, a. Resembling or suggestive of physic. physico-, comb. form. physico-theology, n. Theology based upon natural philosophy, natural theology.

physio- [Gr. phusis, nature], comb. form. Pertaining to nature. physiocracy (fiz i ok' rā si) [-CRACY], n. Government according to a natural order, taught by François Quesnay (1694–1774), founder of the physiocrats, to be inherent in society. physiocrat (fiz' i ō krăt), n. physiocratic (-krăt' ik), n. physiocratism (-ok' rā tizm), n. physiogeny (fiz i oj' ē ni) [-GENY], n. The genesis or evolution of vital functions; the history of this. physiogenic (-jen' ik), a.

physiognomy (fiz i on' ō mi, -og' nō mi) [M.E. fisnomie, O.F. phisonomie, med. L. phisonomia, Gr. phusiognōmonia (physio-, gnōmōn, interpreter)], n. The art of reading character from features of the face or the form of the body; the face or countenance as an index of character; cast of features; (colloq.) the face; the lineaments or external features (of a landscape etc.); aspect, appearance, look (of a situation, event, etc.). physiognomic, -al (-nom' ik, -ăl), a. physiognomically, adv. physiognomist (-og' nō mist), n.

physiography (fiz i og' rā fi) [PHYSIO-, -GRAPHY], n. The scientific description of the physical features of the earth, and the physiolatry (fiz i ol' à tri) [PHYSIO-, -LATRY], n. Nature-worship.

physiology (fiz i ol' ò ji) [L. and G. physiologia (PHYSIO-, -LOGY)], n. The science of the vital phenomena and the organic functions of animals and plants. physiologic, -al (-loj' ik, -ăl), a. physiologically, adv. physiologist (-ol' ò jist), n. One versed in physiology. physiotherapy (fiz i o ther' a pi), n. The treatment of disease by means of natural forces, e.g. by actinotherapy, massage, etc.

physique (fi zēk') [F., as PHYSIC], n. Physical structure or constitution of a person.

physitheism (fiz i thē' izm) [PHYSI-, THEISM], n. Deification of natural forces or phenomena. physiurgic (-ėr' jik) [Gr. ergon, work, -IC], a. Produced or affected solely by natural causes.

physo- [Gr. phūsa, bellows, bladder, cogn. with phūsan, to blow], comb. form. (Zool.) Relating to the bladder. physoclist (fī' sò klist) [Gr. -kleistos, shut], n. Belonging to the Physoclisti, a division of teleostean fishes having the air-bladder closed and not connected with the intestine. physoclistous (-klis' tùs), a. physograde (fī' sò grād) [L. -gradus, going], n. Any individual of the Physograda, containing siphonophores with a vesicular organ which renders them buoyant. physopod (fiz' ò pod) [Gr. pous podos, foot], n. A mollusc with suckers on the feet. physostigma (fī sò stig' mà) [STIGMA], n. (Bot.) A genus of W. African climbing plants of the bean family containing the highly poisonous Calabar bean; this bean or its extract. physostigmine, n. A toxic alkaloid constituting the active principle of the Calabar bean. physostome (fī' sò stōm) [Gr. -stoma, mouth], a. Belonging to the Physostomi, a division of teleostean fishes having the air-bladder connected by a duct with the intestinal canal; n. A fish of this division. physostomous (-sos' tò mùs), a.

-phyte [Gr. phuton, plant], suf. Denoting a vegetable organism; as in lithophyte, zoophyte.

phyto- [Gr. phuton, plant], comb. form. phytobranchiate (fī tò brăng' ki āt) [BRANCHIATE], a. Having leaf-like gills (of certain crustaceans). phytochemistry (-kem' is tri), n. The chemistry of plants. phytochemical, a. phytogenesis (fī tò jèn è sis), phytogeny (fī toj' è ni) [GENESIS, -GENY], n. The origin, generation, or evolution of plants. phytogeography (-og' rà fi), n. The geographical distribution of plants. phytography (fī tog' rà fi) [-GRAPHY], n. The systematic description and naming of plants. phytoid, a. Plant-like; n. A plant-bud. phytology (fī tol' ò ji) [-LOGY], n. Botany. phytologist, n. phytomer (fī' tò-, fit' ò mėr) [Gr. meros, part], n. A phyton. phyton (fī' tòn, fit' òn), n. A plant-unit. phytonomy (fi ton' ò mi) [-NOMY], n. The science of plant growth. phytopathology (-pà thol' ò ji), n. The science of the diseases of plants; the pathology of diseases due to vegetable organisms. phytopathological (-loj' i kàl), a. phytopathologist (-thol' ò jist), n. phytophagous (fī tof' à gùs) [-PHAGOUS], a. phytotomy (fī tot' ò mi) [-TOMY], n. Dissection of plants, vegetable anatomy. phytozoon (fī tò zō' òn) [Gr. zōon, animal], n. (pl. -zoa) A plant-like animal, a zoophyte.

pi (1) (pī) [Gr. pi], n. The Greek letter π, p; (Math.) The symbol representing the ratio of the circumference of a circle to the diameter, i.e. 3·14159265.

pi (2) [PIE (3)].

pia (pē' à) [Hawaiian], n. A Polynesian herb of the genus Tacca, esp. T. pinnatifida, yielding a variety of arrow-root.

piacular (pī ăk' ū làr) [L. piāculāris, from piāculum, expiation, from piāre, to propitiate], a. Expiatory; requiring expiation; atrociously bad.

piaffe (pyăf) [F. piaffer, etym. doubtful], v.i. To move at a piaffer (of a horse). n. An act of piaffing. piaffer, n. A movement like a trot but slower.

pia mater (pī à mā' tėr) [med. L. version of Arab. umm raqīqah, tender mother], n. (Anat.) A delicate membrane, the innermost of the three meninges investing the brain and spinal cord; (fig.) the brain.

pianette (pē à net') [PIANO (2), -ETTE], pianino (pē à nē' nō) [It., dim. of PIANO (2)], n. A small piano.

pianissimo (pē à nis' i mō) [It., superl. of PIANO (1)], adv. (Mus.) Very softly. a. Very soft. n. A passage so rendered.

piano (1) (pya' nō) [It., from L. plānus, even, flat, late L., soft, low], adv. (Mus.) Softly. a. Played softly. n. A passage so rendered.

piano (2) (pē ăn' ō), pianoforte (pē ăn ò fôr' ti, -ăn' ò fôrt) [It., earlier piano e forte, L. plānus et fortis, soft and strong], n. A musical instrument the sounds of which are produced by blows on the wire strings from hammers acted upon by levers set in motion by keys. cottage piano: A small upright piano. grand piano: A large horizontal, harp-shaped piano. upright piano: A piano with the case standing vertical and the strings usually at right angles to the keyboard. piano-organ, n. A mechanical organ worked on similar principles to those of the barrel-organ. piano-player, n. A pianist; a device for playing a piano mechanically. pianola (pē àn ō' là), n. Protected trade name of a piano-player. pianism, n. Piano-playing; the technique of this. pianist (pi àn ist, pē' à nist), n. A performer on the pianoforte. pianiste (pē à nēst') [F.], n. A female pianist.

piastre (pi ăs' tėr) [F., from It. piastra, plate or leaf of metal, as PLASTER], n. The Spanish dollar or silver peso, worth about 4*s.* 2*d.*; a small coin of Turkey and its dependencies with values ranging from about 2*d.* to 6*d.*

polyarchy (pol' i ar ki) [POLY-, Gr. archia, government, from archein, to rule], n. Government by many. polyatomic (-ă tom' ik), a. (Chem.) Applied to elements having more than one atom in their molecules, esp. replaceable atoms of hydrogen. polyautography (-aw tog' rā fi), n. The process of multiplying copies of handwriting, drawings, etc., an early name for lithography. polybasic (-bā' sik), a. (Chem.) Having two or more equivalents of a base (of acids etc.). polybasite (pŏ lib' ā sīt), n. (Min.) An iron-black orthorhombic mineral. polycarpellary, -carpous (-kar' pĕ lăr i, -kar' pŭs), a. (Bot.) Composed of several carpels. polychæte (pol' i kēt), a. (Zool.) Belonging to the Polychæta, a class of worms with setæ, mostly marine; n. A polychæte worm. polychætan, -tous (-kē' tăn, -tŭs), a. polychord (pol' i kôrd), a. Having many chords; n. (Mus.) A ten-stringed musical instrument resembling the double bass without a neck; (Organ) an apparatus coupling two octave notes. polychroite (pol' i krō īt), n. The yellow colouring-matter of saffron.

polychromatic (pol i krō măt' ik) [POLY-, CHROMATIC], a. Exhibiting many colours or a play of colours. polychrome (pol' i krōm), n. A work of art executed in several colours, esp. a statue; a. Having or executed in many colours. polychromic (-krō' mik), polychromous (pol' i krō mŭs), a. polychromy, n. The art of decorating (pottery, statuary, or buildings) in many colours.

polyclinic (pol i klin' ik) [POLY-, after POLICLINIC], n. A clinic dealing with various diseases; a general hospital.

polycotyledon (pol i kot i lē' dŏn) [POLY-, COTYLEDON], n. (Bot.) A plant with seeds having more than two cotyledons. polycotyledonous, a. polycracy [POLYARCHY]. polydactyl (pol i dăk' til), a. Having more than the normal number of fingers or toes. n. A polydactyl animal. polydactylism, n. polydactylous, a. polydæmonism (-dē' mŏ nizm), n. Belief in numerous demons or spirits controlling the operations of nature. polydipsia (-dip' si ă), n. (Path.) Insatiable thirst.

polygamia (pol i gă' mi ă) [POLY-, Gr. gamos, marriage], n.pl. (Bot.) A Linnæan class of plants, bearing hermaphrodite and unisexual (male or female) flowers on the same plant. polygamian, a. and n. polygamic (-găm' ik), a. Polygamous. polygamy (pŏ lig' ă mi), n. The practice or condition of having a plurality of wives or husbands at the same time; (Zool.) the state of having more than one mate; *(Bot.) the state of being polygamian. polygamist (pŏ lig' ă mist), n. polygamous, a.

polygenesis (pol i jen' ē sis) [POLY-, GENESIS], n. (Biol.) The doctrine that living beings originate not in one but in several different cells or embryos. polygenetic (-jē net' ik), a. polygenic (-jen' ik), a. (Chem.) Forming more than one compound with hydrogen; (Geol.) polygenous. polygenism (pŏ lij' ē nizm), n. (Ethnol.) The doctrine that the different races of mankind are descended from different original ancestors, and therefore represent different species. polygenist, n. polygenistic (-nis' tik), a. polygenous (pŏ lij' ē nŭs), a. (Geol.) Consisting of many kinds of material; (Chem.) polygenic.

polyglot (pol' i glot) [Gr. poluglōttos (POLY-, glōtta, tongue], a. Expressed in or speaking many languages. n. A book, esp. the Bible, written or set forth in many languages. polyglottal, -tic (-glot' ăl, -ik), a. polyglottism (pol' i glot izm), n.

polygon (pol' i gŏn) [L. polygōnum, Gr. polugōnon (POLY-, gōnia, corner, angle)], n. A figure, usu. rectilinear, of more than four angles or sides. polygonal, -nous (pŏ lig' ŏ năl, -nŭs), a. polygonally, adv.

polygonum (pŏ lig' ŏ nŭm) [Gr. polugōnon (POLY-, gonu, knee)], n. (Bot.) A genus of plants comprising the snakeweed, knot-grass, etc., belonging to the family Polygonaceæ.

polygram (pol' i grăm) [POLY-, -GRAM], n. A figure consisting of many lines. polygraph, n. An apparatus for multiplying copies of writing, drawings, etc.; a writer of multifarious works; a collection of different works. polygraphic (-grăf' ik), a. polygraphy (pŏ lig' rá fi), n.

polygynia (pol i jin' i ă) [POLY-, gunē, woman], n.pl. (Bot.) A Linnæan class of plants containing those having flowers with many pistils. polygynian, polygynic (-jin' ik), a. polygynous (pŏ lij' i nŭs), a. Pertaining to or practising polygamy; (Bot.) polygynic. polygyny, n. Plurality of wives.

polyhedron (pol i hē' drŏn, -hed' rŏn) [Gr. poluedron (POLY-, hedra, a base)], n. (pl. -dra) A solid bounded by many (usu. more than four) plane sides. polyhedral, -hedric (-hed' rik), -hedrous (-hē' drŭs), a. Having many sides.

polyhistor (pol i his' tŏr) [Gr. poluistōr (POLY-, histōr, learned, see HISTORY)], n. A person of much and various learning; a great scholar. polymath (pol' i măth), n. A polyhistor. polymathic (-măth' ik), a. polymathist (pŏ lim' ă thist), n. polymathy, n. Wide and multifarious learning.

polymerism (pŏ lim' ĕr izm) [Gr. polumerēs (POLY-, meros, portion), -ISM], n. (Chem.) The state of having the same percentage composition as another compound of different molecular weights; (Nat. Hist.) the state of being polymerous. polymeric (-mer' ik), a. polymerize (pol' i mĕr iz, pŏ lim' ĕr iz), v.t. To render polymerous or polymeric; v.i. To become polymeric. polymerous (pŏ lim' ĕr ŭs), a. (Nat. Hist.) Consisting of many parts; (Chem.) polymeric.

polymignite (pol i mig' nīt) [POLY-, Gr. mignunai, to mix, -ITE], n. (Min.) An orthorhombic brilliant black mineral composed of the cerium metals with iron and calcium.

polymorphic, -morphous (pol i môr' fik, -môr' fŭs) [POLY-, Gr. morphē, form], a. Having many forms. polymorph (pol' i môrf), n. polymorphism (-môr' fizm), n. polyneme (pol' i nēm) [Gr. nēma, thread], n. (Ichthyol.) Any fish belonging to the genus Polynemus, consisting of tropical spiny seafishes having the pectoral fin divided into free rays.

Polynesia (pol i nē' shi ă, -si ă) [POLY-, Gr. nēsos, island], n. A multitude of islands, the name of the numerous islands in the Pacific, east of Australia. Polynesian, a. Pertaining to Polynesia; n. A native of Polynesia.

polynia (pŏ lin' i ă) [Rus. poluinya], n. An open place in water that is for the most part frozen over, esp. in the Arctic.

polynomial (pol i nō' mi ăl) [POLY-, L. nōmen, name], a. (Alg.) Multinomial. n. A multinomial. polynomialism, n. polynomialist, n. polynomic (-nom' ik), a. polyonymous (-on' i mŭs), a. Having many different names. polyonym (pol' i ŏ nim), n. polyonymic (-nim' ik), a. polyonymist (-on'-), n. polyonymy, n. polyopia (-ō' pi ă), n. (Path.) Double or multiple vision. polyoptrum, -tron (-op' trŭm, -trŏn), n. A lens giving a number of diminished images of an object. polyorama (-ŏ răm' ă, -ŏ ra' mă), n. A view of many objects; an optical apparatus low organization, as the hydra, anemone, etc., an individual in a compou organism of various kinds. polype (pol' i pār i), n. The calcareous or chitinous structure supporting a colony of polypi.

polypetalous (pol i pet' ă lŭs) [POLY-, PETALOUS], a. (Bot.) Having many or separate petals. polyphagous (pŏ lif' ă gŭs), a. (Zool.) Feeding on various kinds of food; voracious. polypharmacy (pol i far' mă si), n. (Med.) The prescribing of too many medicines; a prescription composed of many ingredients. polyphone (pol' i fōn) [Gr. poluphōnos (POLY-, phonē, voice, sound)], n. (Philol.) A character or sign standing for more than one sound. polyphonic (-fon' ik), a. Representing different sounds; (Mus.) contrapuntal; having several sounds or voices, many-voiced. polyphonism, -ony (pŏ lif' ŏ nizm, -ŏ ni), n. The state of being polyphonic; (Mus.) composition in parts, each part having an independent melody of its own, counterpoint. polyphonist, n. A ventriloquist; (Mus.) a contrapuntist. polyphonous, a. Polyphonic. polyphyletic (pol i fi let' ik) [POLY-, PHYLETIC], a. (Biol.) Polygenetic. polyphyllous (pol i fil' ŭs), a. (Bot.) Having many leaves. polyplastic (-plăs' tik), a. Having or assuming many forms. polypidom (pŏ lip' i dŏm) [POLYPUS, L. domus, Gr. domos, house], n. A polypary. polypite (pol' i pīt), n. An individual polyp. polypod (pol' i pod) [F. polypode (POLY-, Gr. pous podos, foot)], a. (Zool.) Having numerous feet. n. A millepede, e.g. a wood-louse. polypody (pol' i pŏd i) [L. polypodium, Gr. polupodion (POLY-, podion, dim. of pous podos, foot)], n. (Bot.) A fern of the genus Polypodium, esp. P. vulgaris, the common polypody, growing on rocks, walls, trees, etc. polypodiaceous (-ā' shŭs), a. polypoid (pol' i poid) [POLYP, -OID], a. (Zool.) Like a polyp or polypus. polypose, -pous, a. polyporous (pŏ lip' ŏ rŭs) [POLY-, POROUS], a. Having many pores. polyporus (pŏ lip' ŏ rŭs) [Gr. poluporos (POLY-, PORE (I), -OUS)], n. (Bot.) A genus of hymenomycetous fungi growing on the decaying parts of trees, the spores of which are borne on the inner surface of pores or tubes. polyporaceous (-rā' shŭs), a. polyporoid (pŏ lip' ŏ roid), a. polypus (pol' i pŭs) [L., from Gr. polupous (POLY-, pous podos, foot)], n. (pl. -pī) (Path.) A tumour with ramifications growing in any of the mucous cavities; (Zool.) a polyp. polyrhizous (pol i rī' zŭs) [POLY-, Gr. rhiza, root, -OUS], a. Having many roots. polyscope (pol' i skōp) [-SCOPE], n. A multiplying-glass; (Surg.) an instrument for lighting the cavities of the body for surgical examination. polysepalous (pol i sep' ă lŭs), a. (Bot.) Having the sepals distinct. polyspermal, -mous (-spĕr' măl, -mŭs), a. (Bot.) Having many seeds. polyspore, n. A compound spore; a spore-case containing many spores. polysporous (-spŏr' ŭs), a. polystigmous (-stig' mŭs), a. Having several carpels each bearing a stigma. polystome (pol' i stōm), a. Having many mouths; n. An animal with many mouths or suckers. polystomatous (-stom' ă tŭs), polystomous (-lis' tŏ mŭs), a. polystyle (pol' i stil) [POLY-, Gr. stulos, column], a. (Arch.) Having or supported on many columns. polystylous (-stī' lŭs), a. polysyllabic (pol i si lăb' ik) [L. polysyllabus, Gr. polusullabos (SYLLABIC)], a. Consisting of many syllables; characterized by polysyllables. polysyllable, n. polysyndeton (pol i sin' dė tŏn) [POLY-, Gr. sundetos, from sundeein (SYN-, deein, to bind)], n. A figure in which the conjunction or copulative is repeated several times. polysynthetic (-sin thet' ik), a. Compounded of several elements; (Philol.) combining several words (as verbs and adverbs, complements, etc.) into one. polysynthesis (-sin' thė sis), n. polysynthetically (-thet' i ká li), adv. polysyntheticism (-sizm), polysynthetism (-sin' thė tizm), n. polytechnic (pol i tek' nik) [F. polytechnique, Gr. polutechnos (POLY-, technē, art), -IC], a. Connected with, pertaining to, or giving instruction in many arts. n. A polytechnic school or institution. polytechnic school or institution: A school or educational institution for instruction in arts and science, esp. in their practical application. polythalamous (pol i thăl' ă mŭs) [POLY-, THALAMUS], a. (Nat. Hist.) Having many cells or chambers. polytheism (pol' i thē izm) [F. polythéisme, Gr. polutheos (POLY-, theos, god), -ISM], n. The doctrine or worship of a plurality of gods. polytheist, n. polytheistic, -al (-thė is' tik, -ăl), a. polytocous (pŏ lit' ŏ kŭs) [Gr. polutokos (POLY-, Gr. tokos, a bringing forth, cogn. with tiktein, to bring forth)], a. (Zool.) Multiparous, producing several at a birth. polytomous (pŏ lit' ŏ mŭs), a. (Bot.) Pinnate, the divisions not articulated with a common petiole. polytype (pol' i tīp) [POLY-, TYPE], a. A form of stereotype obtained by pressing wood-engravings etc. into semifluid metal; a print obtained in this way. polytypage, n. polytypic (-tip' ik), a. Having or existing in many forms. polyzoa (pol i zō' ă) [POLY-, Gr. zōon, animal], n.pl. (sing. -zoon, -zō' on) A class of invertebrate animals, mostly marine, produced by gemmation, sometimes regarded as the lowest members of the mollusca, existing in coral-like or plant-like compound colonies. polyzoal, a. polyzoan, a. and n. polyzoary, n. The polypidom of a polyzoic colony. polyzoarial (-ăr' i ăl), a. polyzoic (-zō' ik), polyzooid (-zō' oid), a. polyzonal (pol i zō' năl) [POLY-, ZONAL], a. Composed of many zones or annular segments (of lighthouse lenses).

pomace (pŭm' ăs) [history obscure, from F. pomme or L. pōmum, apple], n. The mashed pulp of apples crushed in a cider-mill, esp. the refuse after the juice has been pressed out. pomaceous (pŏ mā' shŭs), a. (Bot.) Of the nature of a pome or of trees producing pomes, as the apple, pear, quince, etc. pomade (pŏ mād', -mad') [F. pommade, from pomme, apple], n. Pomatum. v.t. To apply this to (the hair etc.). pomander (pŏ' măn-, pom' ăn dėr, pŏ man' dėr) [altered from pomamber, O.F. pomme d'ambre (pomme, apple, ambre, AMBER)], n.

A perfumed ball or powder usu. carried in a box, bag, etc. about the person to prevent infection; the box or hollow ball, usu. of gold or silver and ornamentally designed, in which this was carried.

L. (MARTYR)], n. A first martyr (applied esp. to St. Stephen); the first who suffers in any cause. protonotary [PROTHONOTARY]. Protophyta (prō tō fi' tă) [Gr. phuta, plants, sing. phuton], n.pl. (Bot.) A primary division of the vegetable kingdom comprising plants of the lowest organization, usu. microscopic in size and unicellular. protophyte (prō' tō fit), n.

proton (prō' ton) [Gr. protos, first], n. (Elec.) A particle of positive electricity having the same amount of electricity as the electron; the unit of mass of positive electricity.

protoplasm (prō' tō plăzm) [Gr. prōtoplasma (PROTO-, Gr. plasma, a moulded thing, from plassein, to mould)], n. The viscid semifluid substance composed of oxygen, hydrogen, carbon, and nitrogen, constituting the living matter from which all living organisms are developed. protoplasmatic (-măt' ik), protoplasmic (-plăz' mik), a.

protosalt (prō' tō sawlt) [PROTO-, SALT], n. (Chem.) A salt corresponding to the protoxide of a metal. protosulphide (prō tō sŭl fid) [SULPHIDE], n. (Chem.) One of a series of sulphides containing the lowest proportion of sulphur. prototheria (prō tō thēr' i ă) [Gr. thēria, beasts], n.pl. (Zool.) Huxley's name for the lowest division of mammals comprising the Monotremata and their ancestors. prototherе (prō' tō thēr). prototherian (-thēr i ăn), a. and n.

prototype (prō' tō tip) [F., from Gr. prototupos (PROTO-, TYPE)], n. An original or primary type or model, an exemplar, an archetype. prototypal (-ti' pal), prototypic, -al (-tip' ik, -ăl), a. protoxide (prō tok' sid) [OXIDE], n. (Chem.) A compound of oxygen and an element containing the lowest proportion of oxygen. protoxydize, v.t.

protozoa (prō tō zō' ă) [PROTO-, Gr. zōa, animals, sing. zōon], n.pl. (sing. -zoon) (Zool.) The lowest division of the animal kingdom, comprising those consisting of a single cell or a group of cells not differentiated into tissues. protozoal, -zoan, -zoic, -zoön, -zoötic, -zoötoxin, -zoötoxoid, -zoötoxoidal, -zoötoxoidin, -zoötoxoidism, -zoötoxoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoid, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidal, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidin, -zoötoxoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidoidism, push (push) [O.F. pousser, L. pulsāre, to PULSATE], v.t. To press against with force, tending to urge forward; to move (a body along, up, down, etc.) thus; to urge forward, to impel, to drive, to carry on vigorously; to make (one's way) vigorously; to cause to shoot out or project; to press hard. v.i. To exert pressure (against, upon, etc.); to press forward, to make one's way vigorously, to hasten forward energetically; to thrust or butt (against); (Billiards) to make a push-stroke. n. The act of pushing, a thrust, a shove; a vigorous effort, an attempt, an onset; pressure; an exigency, a crisis, an extremity; (colloq.) persevering energy, self-assertion; (Mil.) an offensive; (Billiards) a stroke in which the ball is pushed, not struck; to get the push: (slang) To lose one's job. to push off: To push against the bank with an oar so as to move a boat off; (slang) to go away. to push on: To press forward; to hasten; to urge or drive on. push-bike, -bicycle, n. One worked by the rider as distinguished from a motor-bicycle. push-button, n. (Elec.) A device for opening or closing an electric circuit by the pressure of the finger on a button. push-pin, n. A child's game. push-stroke, n. (Billiards) A push. pusher, n. pusher aeroplane, n. (Aer.) An aeroplane with its propeller at the rear. pushful, a. (colloq.) Self-assertive, energetic, vigorous or persistent in advancing oneself. pushfulness, n. pushing, a. Enterprising, energetic. pushingly, adv. push-pull amplification, n. (Wire.) Amplification by utilizing at each stage two similar three-electrode valves.

Pushtoo (pŭsh' too) [Pers. Pashto], n. The Afghan language.

pusillanimous (pū si lăn' i mùs) [eccl. L. pusillanimus (pusillus, small, petty, animus, soul)], a. Destitute of courage, firmness, or strength of mind, fainthearted. pusillanimity (-nim' i ti), n. pusillanimousness, pusillanimously, adv.

puss (pus) [cp. Dut. poes, L.G. puus, Norw. puse, Swed. dial. pus; prob. imit.], n. A pet name for a cat, esp. in calling; a hare; (colloq.) a child, a girl. puss-moth, n. A large moth of the genus Bombyx, Cerura vinula. pussy, n. (Childish) Puss. pussy-cat, n. A cat; anything woolly or fuzzy, as a willow catkin. pussyfoot [from nickname of W. E. Johnson, 1862–1945], n. A fanatic advocate of prohibition. pussy-willow, n. A small American willow, Salix discolor.

pustule (pŭs' tūl) [F., from L. pustula, prob. conn. with Gr. phusalis, phuskē, a bladder, phusan, to blow], n. A small vesicle containing pus, a pimple; (Bot., Zool., etc.) a small excrescence, a wart, a blister. pustular, a. pustulate (pŭs' tū lāt), v.t. and i. To form into pustules; a. (-lāt) Covered with pustules or excrescences. pustulation (-lā' shùn), n. pustulous, a.

put (1) (put) [late A.-S. putian (in putung), potian, to put, pŷtan, to put or thrust out], v.t. To move so as to place in some position; to set, lay, place, or deposit; to bring into some particular state or condition; to present, to produce; to express, to state, to render, to translate (into); to apply, to set, to submit, to impose; to stake (money on), to dispose, to inflict; to subject, to commit (to or upon); to advance, to propose (for consideration etc.); to constrain, to incite, to force, to make (a person do etc.); to make (one) appear in the right, wrong, etc.; to hurl, to cast, to throw; to thrust, to stab with. v.i. (Naut.) To go, to proceed, to steer one's course (in a specified direction). n. The act of putting; a cast, a throw (of a weight etc.); an agreement to sell or deliver (stock, goods, etc.) at a stipulated price within a specified time; a thrust; *a game of cards. to put about: To inconvenience; (Naut.) to go about, to change the course of to the opposite tack; (colloq.) to make public, to spread abroad. to put across: To effect successfully. to put away: To remove; to lay by; to divorce; (slang) to consume. to put back: To retard, to check the forward motion of; to move the hands of (a clock) back; to replace; (Naut.) to return (to land etc.). to put by: To put, set, or lay aside; to evade; to put off with evasion; (colloq.) to desist from. to put down: To suppress, to crush; to take down, to snub, to degrade; to confute, to silence; to reduce, to diminish; to set down, to enter, to subscribe; to reckon, to consider, to attribute; (colloq.) to dispense with, to give up. to put forth: To present to notice; to publish, to put into circulation; to extend; to shoot out; to exert; to sprout, to bud. to put forward: To set forth, to advance, to propose; to thrust (oneself) into prominence; to move the hands of (a clock) onwards. to put in: To introduce, to interject, to interpose; to insert, to enter; to install in office etc., to present, to submit (in a court of law etc.); to enter a harbour; (colloq.) to spend, to pass (time). to put in mind: To remind. to put it past one: To consider one incapable of some action. to put off. To lay aside, to discard, to take off; to postpone; to disappoint, to evade, to hinder, to dissuade (from); to foist, to palm off (with). to put on: To take on; to clothe oneself with; to assume; to add; to bring into play, to exert; to appoint; to move the hands of (a clock) forward. to put out: To invest, to place (at interest); to eject; to extinguish; to disconcert; to annoy, to irritate; to inconvenience; to exert; to dislocate. to put to it: To distress; to press hard. to put up: To raise; to offer, to present; to offer (oneself) as a candidate; to present as a candidate; to publish (banns etc.); to pack up; to place in a safe place; to lay aside; to erect, to build; to lodge and entertain. to put up with: To tolerate, to submit to. to put upon: To victimize. putter (1), n. to stay put: To remain, not to move.

put (3) [PUTT].

putamen (pū tā' mĕn) [L., from putāre, to prune], n. The hard bony stone or endocarp of a drupe; the membrane or skin of an egg; (Anat.) the outer zone of the lenticular nucleus of the brain.

putative (pū' tă tiv) [F. putatif, fem. -tive, late L. putātīvus, from putāre, to think], a. Reputed, supposed; commonly regarded as. putatively, adv.

puteal (pū' tē ăl) [L. puteāle, neut. of puteālis, from puteus, well], n. The stone kerb round the opening of a well.

putrefy (pū' trĕ fī) [F. putréfier, L. putrefacere (putre-, as in putrēre, to be rotten, facere, to make)], v.t. To make putrid; to cause to rot or decay; to make carious or gangrenous; to corrupt. v.i. To become putrid, to rot, to decay; to fester, to suppurate. putrifactious (pū trĕ' i nŭs), a. putrefaction (-făk' shŭn), n. putrefactive (pū' trĕ făk tiv), a. putrescent (pū tres' ĕnt), a. putrescence, n. putrescible, a. putrescin (pū tres' in), n. (Chem.) A poisonous alkaloid contained in decaying animal matter.

putrid (pū' trid) [L. putridus, from putrēre, to rot, from puter, rotten], a. In a state of putrefaction, decomposition, or decay; tainted, foul, noxious; (fig.) corrupt. putrid fever: Typhus or jail-fever. putrid sore throat: A gangrenous form of laryngitis or diphtheria. putridity (-trid' i ti), putridness, n. putridly, adv.

putsch (puch) [G.], n. A rising, revolt.

putt (pŭt) [var. of PUT (1)], v.i. (Golf) To strike the ball with a putter. v.t. To strike (the ball) gently with a putter so as to get it into the hole on the putting-green. n. This stroke. putter (2) (pŭt' ĕr), n. A short, stiff golf-club, used for striking the ball on the putting-green. putting-green, n. The piece of ground on a golf-course, usu. kept rolled, closely mown, and clear of obstacles, round a putting-hole.

puttee (pŭt' i) [Hindi paṭṭi, bandage], n. A long strip of cloth wound spirally round the leg, usu. from ankle to knee, as a form of gaiter.

putter (2), putting-green, etc. [PUTT].

puttier [PUTTY].

puttock (pŭt' ŏk) [M.E. puttocke, etym. doubtful], n. A kite or buzzard.

putty (pŭt' i) [F. potée, orig. potful, see POT], n. Calcined tin or lead used by jewellers as polishing-powder for glass, metal, etc.; whiting and linseed-oil beaten up into a tenacious cement, used in glazing; fine lime-mortar used by plasterers for filling cracks etc. v.t. To fix, cement, fill up, or cover with putty. putty-faced, a. Having a smooth, colourless face like putty. putty-powder, n. Jewellers' putty in the form of powder, used for polishing. putty-root, n. An American orchid, Aplectrum hyemale, the root of which contains glutinous matter used as cement. puttier, n. A worker with putty, a glazier.

put-up (put ŭp') [PUT (1), UP], a. (slang) Pre-concerted or contrived in an artful way.

puy (pwē) [F., ult. from L. podium, elevation, height], n. A conical hill of volcanic origin, esp. in Auvergne.

puzzle (pŭzl) [etym. doubtful], n. A state of bewilderment or perplexity; a perplexing problem, question, or enigma; a toy, riddle, or other contrivance for exercising ingenuity or patience. v.t. To perplex, to embarrass, to mystify; to make intricate. v.i. To be bewildered or perplexed. to puzzle out: To discover, or work out by mental labour. puzzle-headed, a. Having the head full of confused notions. puzzle-peg, n. A piece of wood fastened under the jaw of a dog so as to keep his nose from the ground. puzzledom, puzzlement, puzzler, n. puzzlingly, adv.

puzzolana [POZZOLANA].

pyæmia (pī ē' miă) [Gr. puon, pus, haima, blood], n. (Path.) Blood-poisoning, due to the absorption of putrid matter into the system. pyæmic, a.

pycnidium (pik nid′ i ùm) [Gr. puknos, thick, -idion, dim. suf.], n. (pl. -dia) (Bot.) A receptacle bearing pycnidiospores or stylospores in certain fungi. pycnid (pik′ nid), n. pycnidiospore (pik nid′ i ò spôr), n. A stylospore developed in a pycnidium.

pycnite (pik′ nīt) [Gr. pukn-os, see foll., -ITE], n. (Min.) A columnar variety of topaz.

pycno- [Gr. puknos, thick, dense], comb. form. pycnodont (pik′ nò dont) [Gr. odous odontos, tooth], n. (Ichthyol.) Any individual of the Pycnodontidæ, a family of extinct ganoid fishes; a. Pertaining to or having the characteristics of the Pycnodontidæ. pycnogonid (pik nog′ ò nid) [Gr. gonu, knee], n. (Zool.) A marine arthropod belonging to the family Pycnogonida, comprising the sea-spiders. pycnogonoid, a. and n. pycnometer (pik nom′ ē tèr) [-METER], n. A bottle or flask used in measuring the specific gravity of fluids. pycnospore [PYCNIDIOSPORE]. pycnostyle (pik′ nò stil) [Gr. stulos, column], a. (Arch.) Having an intercolumniation of one diameter and a half; n. A pycnostyle building.

pyelitis (pī ē lī′ tis) [mod. L. (Gr. puelos, trough, -ITIS)], n. (Path.) Inflammation of the pelvis of the kidney. pyelitic (-lit′ ik), a. pyelo-, comb. form. pyelonephritis (-né frī′ tis), n. Inflammation of the kidney and of the renal pelvis. pyelonephritic (-frit′ ik), a. pyemia [PYÆMIA].

pygal (pī′ gal) [Gr. pug-ē, rump, -AL], a. (Zool.) Of, pertaining to, or near the rump or hind quarters. n. The pygal shield or plate of the carapace of a turtle.

pygarg (pī′ garg) [L. pygargus, Gr. pugargus (pug-ē, rump, argos, white)], n. The osprey; an antelope mentioned by Herodotus and Pliny.

pygmy (pig′ mi) [L. pygmæus, Gr. pugmaios, dwarfish, from pugmē, fist, the length from elbow to knuckles], n. One of a race of dwarfish people mentioned by Herodotus and other ancient historians as living in Africa and India; one of various dwarfish races living in Malaysia and Central Africa, esp. the Akka, Batwa, and Obongo of equatorial Africa; a dwarf, a small man, anything very diminutive; a pixy, a fairy; (fig.) one having a certain faculty or quality in relatively a very small degree; *the chimpanzee. a. Pygmæan. pygmæan (-mē′ ăn), a.

pygo- [Gr. pugo-, pugē, rump], comb. form. pygopod (pī′ gò pod) [Gr. pous podos, foot], a. (Zool.) Of or pertaining to the Pygopedes, an order of aquatic birds comprising the auks, grebes, loons, etc.; of or belonging to the Pygopodidæ, a family of Australian lizards; n. One of the Pygopodidæ. pygostyle (pī′ gò stīl), n. (Ornith.) The vomer or ploughshare bone forming the end of the vertebral column in most birds. pygostyled, a.

pyjamas (pi-, pī ja′ màz) [Pers. and Hind. pāe jāmah (pāe, by, jāmah, clothing, garment)], n.pl. Loose trousers of silk, cotton, etc., worn by both sexes among Mohammedans in India; a sleeping-suit consisting of a loose jacket and trousers.

pylon (pī′ lòn) [Gr. pulōn, from pulē, gate], n. (Arch.) A gateway of imposing form or dimensions, esp. the monumental gateway of an Egyptian temple; a stake marking out the course in an aerodrome; a structure, usu. of steel, supporting an electric cable.

pyo- [Gr. puon, pus], comb. form. (Path.). pyogenesis (pī ò jen′ ē sis) [GENESIS], n. The formation of pus, suppuration. pyogenetic (-net′ ik), pyogenic (-jen′ ik), a. pyoid (pī′ oid), a. Of the nature of pus. pyonephritis (pī ò né frī′ tis) [NEPHRITIS], n. Suppurative inflammation of the kidney. pyonoma (-nō′ mà), n. A suppurating sore. pyopoiesis [PYOGENESIS]. pyoptysis (pī òp tī′ sis), n. Expectoration of pus, as in consumption. pyorrhœa (pī ò rē′ à), n. Discharge of pus. pyosis (pī ō′ sis), n. Suppuration.

pyr- [PYRO-], comb. form. pyracanth (pīr′ à kănth) [L. pyracantha, Gr. puracantha (see ACANTHUS)], n. An evergreen thorny shrub, Cratægus pyracantha, with white flowers and coral-red berries, also called the evergreen thorn, commonly trained against walls as an ornamental climber. pyrallolite (pīr ăl′ ò līt) [Gr. allos, other, -LITE], n. (Min.) An altered pyroxene from Finland.

pyramid (pir′ à mid) [L. pyramis -idis, Gr. puramis -idos, prob. of Egypt. orig.], n. A monumental structure of masonry, with a square base and triangular sloping sides meeting at the apex; a similar solid body, with a triangular or polygonal but usu. square base; a pile or heap of this shape; a tree trained in this form; (Billiards) a game of pool played with fifteen coloured balls and a cue-ball. the Pyramids: The great pyramids of ancient Egypt. pyramidal (pi răm′ i dàl), pyramidic, -al (-mid′ ik, -àl), a. pyramidally, pyramidically, adv. pyramidist (pir′ à mid ist), n. A student or investigator of the origin, structure, etc. of ancient pyramids, esp. those of Egypt. pyramidalism, n. pyramidize, v.t. pyramidoid (pi răm′ i doid), pyramoid (pir′ à moid), n. A solid resembling a pyramid; (errors.) a parabolic spindle. pyramidwise, adv. pyramidon (pi răm′ i dòn) [after ACCORDION], n. (Organ) A stop having stopped pipes like inverted pyramids, producing very deep tones.

pyrargyrite (pi rar′ ji rīt) [PYR-, Gr. argurus, silver, -ITE], n. (Min.) A native sulphide of silver and antimony.

pyre (pīr) [L. pyra, Gr. pura, cogn. with pur, fire], n. A funeral pile for burning a dead body; any pile of combustibles.

pyrene (1) (pī′ rēn) [Gr. purēn], n. (Bot.) The stone of a drupe, a putamen.

pyrene (2) (pī′ rēn) [Gr. pur, fire, -ENE], n. (Chem.) One of the hydrocarbons obtained in the dry distillation of coal.

pyrethrum (pī rē′ thrùm, -reth′ rùm) [L., from Gr. purethron, as prec.], n. A genus of compositous plants (usu. regarded as a sub-division of Chrysanthemum), comprising the feverfew.

pyretic (pī ret′ ik) [Gr. puretos, fever, -IC], a. Of, relating to, or producing fever; remedial in fever. n. A pyretic medicine. pyretology (-tol′ ŏ ji) [-LOGY], n. Pyrex (pī′ reks), n. Protected trade name of a make of heat-resisting glass-ware. pyrexia (pī rek′ si ȧ), n. Fever, feverish condition. pyrexial, -ical, a.

pyridine (pir′-, pīr′ i dīn) [PYR-, -ID, -INE], n. (Chem.) A liquid alkaloid obtained from bone-oil, coal-tar naphtha, etc., used as a remedy for asthma.

pyriform (pīr′-, pir′ i fôrm) [med. L. pyrum, L. pirum, PEAR, -FORM], a. Pear-shaped.

pyrites (pī rī′ tēz) [L., from Gr. puritēs, orig. pertaining to fire, from pur, fire], n. A native sulphide of iron, one of two common sulphides, chalcopyrite, yellow or copper pyrites, or marcasite, usu. called iron pyrites. pyretaceous (-tā′ shŭs), pyritic, -al (pī-, pi rit′ ik, -ȧl), pyritous (pīr′ i tŭs), a. pyritiferous (-tif′ ėr ŭs), a. pyritize (pīr′ i tīz), v.t. pyritoid, a. pyritology (-tol′ ŏ ji) [-LOGY], n.

pyro (pīr′ ō) [short for PYROGALLIC], n. Pyrogallic acid.

pyro- [Gr. pur puros, fire], comb. form. pyro-acetic (pīr ō ȧ sē′ tik) [ACETIC], a. (Chem.) Of or derived from acetic acid by heat. pyroballogy (pīr ō băl′ ŏ ji) [Gr. ballein, to throw], n. The science of hurling fire or of artillery. pyroclastic (-klăs′ tik) [Gr. klastos, broken], a. (Geol.) Formed from or consisting of the fragments broken up or ejected by volcanic action. pyro-electric (pīr′ ō ē lek′ trik) [ELECTRIC], a. (Min.) Becoming electropolar on heating (of some minerals). pyro-electricity (-tris′ i ti), n. pyrogallic (pīr ō găl′ ik) [GALLIC (1)], a. Produced from gallic acid by heat. pyrogallol, n. Pyrogallic acid, used as a developing agent in photography.

pyrogen (pīr′ ŏ jen) [PYRO-, -GEN], n. (Chem.) A substance, such as a ptomaine, that produces fever on being introduced into the body; electricity. pyrogenetic (-net′ ik), pryogenic (-jen′ ik), a. Producing heat; (Path.) producing feverishness; (Geol.) pyrogenous. pyrogenous (pī roj′ ē nŭs), a. (Geol.) Produced by fire, igneous. pyrognomic (pīr ŏg nŏ′ mik) [GNOMIC], a. (Min.) Having the property of becoming incandescent when heated. pyrognostic (-nos′ tik), a. Of or pertaining to those properties of a mineral that are determinable by heat. pyrography (pī rog′ rȧ fi) [-GRAPHY], n. The art of making designs in wood by means of fire, poker-work. pyrograph (pīr′ ŏ grăf), v.i. pyrographer, -phist (pī rog′ rȧ fėr, -fist), n. pyrographic (-grăf′ ik), a. pyrogravure (pīr ŏ grȧ vūr′), n. Pyrography; a picture produced by this means.

pyrolatry (pī rol′ ȧ tri) [PYRO-, -LATRY], n. Fire-worship. pyroligneous (pīr ŏ lig′ nė ŭs) [LIGNEOUS], a. Derived from wood by heat. pyrolignite, n. A salt of pyroligneous acid. pyrology (pī rol′ ŏ ji) [-LOGY], n. The science of fire or heat, esp. the branch of chemistry dealing with the application of heat, blow-pipe analysis, etc. pyrological (-loj′ i kȧl), a. pyrologist (-rol′ ŏ jist), n. pyrolusite (pīr ŏ loo′ sīt) [G. pyrolusit (Gr. lousis, washing, -ITE)], n. (Min.) Native manganese dioxide, one of the most important of the ores of manganese. pyromagnetic (pīr ŏ măg net′ ik) [MAGNETIC], a. Of or pertaining to the alterations of magnetic intensity due to changes in temperature. pyromagnetic generator: A dynamo for generating electricity by induction through changes in the temperature of the field-magnets.

pyromancy (pīr′ ŏ măn si) [O.F. pyromancie, late L. pyromantīa, Gr. puromanteia (-MANCY)], n. Divination by fire. pyromania (pīr ŏ mā′ ni ȧ) [-MANIA], n. Insanity manifested in an irresistible desire to destroy by fire. pyromaniac, n. pyromaniacal (-nī′ ȧ kȧl), a. pyromantic (-măn′ tik), a. Pertaining to pyromancy.

pyrometer (pī rom′ ė tėr) [PYRO-, -METER], n. An instrument for measuring high temperatures; an instrument for measuring the expansion of bodies by heat. pyrometric, -al (-met′ rik, -ȧl), a. pyrometrically, adv. pyrometry (-rom′ ė tri), n. pyromorphous (pīr ŏ môr′ fŭs) [Gr. morphē, from, -OUS], a. (Min.) Crystallizing after fusion by heat. pyronomics (-nom′ iks), n. The science of heat.

pyrope (pīr′ ŏp) [O.F. pirope, L. pyrōpus, Gr. purōpos (pur, fire, ōps, face, eye)], n. (Min.) A deep-red garnet.

pyrophane (pīr′ ŏ fān) [PYRO-, Gr. -phanēs, appearing], n. A variety of opal that absorbs melted wax and becomes translucent when heated and opaque again on cooling. pyrophanous (pī rof′ ȧ nŭs), a. pyrophone (pīr′ ŏ fōn) [-PHONE], n. A musical instrument the notes of which are produced in glass tubes each containing two hydrogen flames. pyrophorus (pī rof′ ŏ rŭs) [mod. L., from Gr. purophoros (-phoros, bearing)], n. (pl. -ri) Any substance taking fire spontaneously on exposure to the air. pyrophoric (-for′ ik), pyrophorous (-rof′ ŏ rŭs), a. pyrophosphoric (pīr ŏ fos for′ ik) [PHOSPHORIC], a. (Chem.) Derived by heat from phosphoric acid. pyro-photograph (pīr ŏ fŏ′ tŏ grăf) [PHOTOGRAPH], n. A photographic picture fixed on glass or porcelain by firing. pyro-photographic (-grăf′ ik), a. pyro-photography (-tog′ rȧ fi), n. pyrophysalite (pīr ŏ fis′ ȧ lit) [Gr. phusallis, bubble], n. (Min.) A coarse, nearly opaque variety of topaz which swells on being heated. pyroscope (pīr′ ŏ skōp) [-SCOPE], n. An instrument for measuring the intensity of radiant heat.

pyrosis (pī rō′ sis) [Gr. purōsis, from puroun, to set on fire], n. (Path.) Heartburn, acid dyspepsia, water-brash.

pyrosome (pīr′ ŏ sōm) [PYRO-, Gr. sōma, body], n. (Zool.) An animal of the genus Pyrosoma, consisting of highly phosphorescent compound ascidians united in cylindrical colonies, mostly belonging to tropical seas. pyrotartaric (pīr ō tar tăr' ik) [TARTARIC], a. (Chem.) Obtained by the dry distillation of tartaric acid. pyrotartrate (-tar' trāt), n. A salt of pyrotartaric acid.

pyrotechnic (pīr ō tek' nik) [PYRO-, Gr. technē, art, -IC], a. Pertaining to fireworks or their manufacture; of the nature of fireworks; (fig.) resembling a firework show, brilliant, dazzling. n.pl. The art of making fireworks; a display of fireworks. pyrotechnical, a. pyrotechnically, adv. pyrotechnist, n. pyrotechny (pīr' ō tek ni), n.

pyrotic (pī rot' ik) [Gr. purōtikos, from puroun, to burn], a. Caustic. n. A caustic substance.

pyroxene (pir' ok sēn, pīr' ok sēn) [PYRO-, Gr. xenos, stranger], n. (Min.) A name used for a group of silicates of lime, magnesium or manganese, of various forms and origin. pyroxenic (-sen' ik), a. pyroxyle (pī rok' sil), pyroxylin (-si lin) [F. pyroxyline (Gr. xulon, wood)], n. Any explosive, including gun-cotton, obtained by immersing vegetable fibre in nitric or nitro-sulphuric acid, and then drying it. pyroxylic (-sil' ik), a. Denoting the crude spirit obtained by the distillation of wood in closed vessels.

Radar (rā' dar) [abbr. *r*adio *d*etection *a*nd *r*anging], n. (Wire.) The employment of reflected or retransmitted radio waves to locate the presence of objects and to determine their angular position and range.

raddle (1) (răd'l) [A.-F. reidele, O.F. reddalle (F. ridelle), a pole, the back rail of a cart], n. A lath, stick, or branch interwoven with others to form a fence, usu. plastered over with clay etc.; a hurdle or hedge of twisted branches. v.t. To interweave, to twist (sticks etc.) together.

radial (rā' di ăl) [RADIUS or RADIUM, -AL], a. Of, pertaining to, or resembling a ray, rays, or radii; extending or directed from a centre as rays or radii, divergent; having radiating parts, lines, etc.; of or pertaining to radium; (Anat.) of or pertaining to the radius of the forearm. n. (Anat.) A radiating part, bone, nerve, artery, etc. radial axle: An axle so arranged as to take the position of a radius to a curve it is traversing on a railway line etc. radial axle-box: An axle-box on a locomotive etc. adapted for such motion. radialize, v.t. To cause to radiate as from a centre. radialization (-zā' shŭn), n. radially, adv. radian, n. (Math.) An arc equal in length to the radius of its circle; the angle subtending such an arc.

radiant (rā' di ănt) [L. radians -ntem, pres.p. of radiāre, as prec.], a. Emitting rays of light or heat; issuing in rays; (fig.) shining, beaming (with joy, love, etc.); splendid, brilliant; (Bot.) radiating, radiate. n. (Astron.) The point from which a star-shower seems to proceed; (Opt.) the point from which light or heat radiates; (Geom.) a straight line proceeding from a fixed pole about which it is conceived as revolving. radiant heat, n. (Med.) Heat by radiation, employed therapeutically in rheumatism by the use of electric lamps. radiant point: (Astron. and Opt.) A radiant. radiance, *-ancy, n. radiantly, adv.

Radiata (rā di ā' tă) [L., neut pl. of radiātus, see foll.], n.pl. (Zool.) Cuvier's name for one of the great divisions of animals in which the organs are arranged round a central axis, as in the sea-anemone and the star-fish.

radiate (rā' di āt) [L. radiātus, p.p. of radiāre, from RADIUS], v.i. To emit rays of light or heat; to send out rays from or as from a centre; to issue and proceed in rays from a central point. v.t. To send out as rays or from a central point; to send forth in all directions, to disseminate. a. (-ăt) Having rays or parts diverging from a centre, radiating; radially arranged, marked, etc., radially symmetrical; (Zool.) belonging to the Radiata. radiate flower: A composite flower in which the florets of the disk are radial and usu. ligulate. radiately, adv. radiatiform (-ā' ti fôrm), a. (Bot.) radiation (-ā' shŭn), n. The act of radiating or emitting rays; (Phys.) the transmission of heat, light, etc. from one body to another without raising the temperature of the intervening medium; travelling outwards, as long radii, to the periphery; a group of rays of the same wave-length. radiative (rā' di ă tiv), a. radiato-, comb. form. radiator (rā' di ā tŏr), n. That which radiates; a vessel, chamber, or coil of pipes charged with hot air, water, steam, etc. for radiating heat in a building; (Motor.) a device for dissipating the heat absorbed by the cooling-water of the jacket.

radical (răd' i kăl) [F., from late L. rādicālis, from rādix -īcis, root], a. Pertaining to the root, source, or origin; inherent, fundamental; original, basic, primary; going to the root, thorough-going, extreme; belonging, pertaining, or according to the Radical party; (Bot.) arising from or close to the root; (Math.) of or pertaining to the root of a number or quantity; (Philol.) pertaining to a root, primary, underived. n. One promoting extreme measures or holding advanced views; a member of the Radical party or the more advanced section of the Liberal party; a fundamental principle; (Philol.) a root; (Math.) a quantity that is, or is expressed as, the root of another; the radical sign ($\sqrt{}$, $\sqrt[3]{}$, etc.); (Chem.) an element, atom, or group of atoms forming the base of a compound and not decomposed by the reactions that normally alter the compound. radicalism, n. radicality (-kăl' i ti), radicalness, n. radicalise, v.t. and i. radicalization (-zā' shŭn), n. radically, adv. Thoroughly, fundamentally, essentially.

radicate (răd' i kăt) [L. rādīcātus, p.p. of rādīcāre, as prec.], a. (Bot.) Having a root, rooted; (Zool.) having root-like organs of attachment (as some molluscs). v.t.* (-kāt) To root, to plant firmly. v.i.* To take root. radicant, a. (Bot.) Producing roots from the stem. radication (-kā' shŭn), n. radicel (răd' i sel), n. A rootlet. radici-, comb. form. radicicolous (răd i sik' ŏ lŭs), a. Infesting roots (as a variety of phyloxera). radiciflorous (-flôr' ŭs), a. Flowering from the root. radiciform (-di' i fôrm), a. radicivorous (-siv' ŏ rŭs), a. Feeding on roots. radicle (răd' ikl) [L. rādīcula, dim. of rādix], n. (Bot.) The part of an embryo that develops into the primary root; a small root, a rootlet; (Anat.) a root-like part of a nerve, vein, etc. radicular (rā dik' ŭ lăr), a. (Bot., Anat., etc.).

radio (rā' di ō) [RADIUM], n. Generic term applied to anything connected with wireless electricity.

radio- (1) (rā' di ō) [RADIUM], comb. form. radioactive (rā di ŏ ăk' tiv), a. Having the property of emitting invisible rays that penetrate bodies opaque to light, affecting the electrometer, photographic plates, etc. radioactivity (-tiv' i ti), n. radio beacon, n. (Wire.) A transmitting station which sends out signals to aid navigators. radio- chemistry, n. The chemistry of the radio-active elements. radio-dramatist, n. One who writes dramas for broadcasting. radio-element, n. (Phys.) A metallic chemical element with radio-active powers. radio-frequency, n. (Wire.) Frequency which is within the range for radio-transmission. radio-frequency amplifier, n. A high-frequency amplifier. radio-frequency choke, n. Air-core choke. radio-frequency resistance, n. High-frequency resistance. radio-frequency transformer, n. A high-frequency transformer. radiogoniometer, n. Adjustment of coils linking aerials in the Bellini-Tosi direction-finding system. radiograph (rā′ di ō grăf), n. An actinograph; a negative produced by Röntgen rays; a print from this; v.t. To obtain a negative of by means of such rays. radiographic (-grăf′ ik), a. radiographically, adv. radiography (-og′ rā fi), n. radio-location, n. The employment of a radio-pulse and the time-delay of its reflection to ascertain the relative position in space of a reflecting object such as an aeroplane. radiologist, n. A medical practitioner specially trained in radiology. radiology, n. The branch of medical science concerned with radioactivity, X-rays and other therapeutic radiations. radiometer (rā di om′ ė tėr), n. An instrument for illustrating the conversion of radiant light and heat into mechanical energy. radiometric (-met′ rik), a. radio-micrometer (-mī krom′ ė tėr), n. An instrument for measuring minute variations of heat etc. radiophone (rā′ di ō fōn), n. An instrument for the production of sound by means of radiant energy. radiophonic (-fon′ ik), a. radiophony (-of′ ō ni), n. radioscopy (-os′ kō pi), n. The examination of bodies by means of Röntgen rays. radiotelegram (-tel′ ė grăm), n. A message sent by wireless telegraphy. radio-therapy, n. The treatment of disease by means of radiation, actino-therapy.

radio- (2) (rā′ di ō) [RADIUS], comb. form. Radiate; pertaining to the outer bone of the forearm. radial, a. (Anat.) Pertaining to the radius. radial artery, n. (Anat.) Artery of the forearm, felt at the wrist when taking the pulse. radiocarpal, a. Pertaining to the radius and the wrist. radiolarian, a. (Zool.) Of or pertaining to the Radiolaria, a class of marine rhizopod protozoa emitting radiate filamentous pseudopodia, abounding in warm seas. n. An individual of the Radiolaria. radiolite, n. (Palæont.) A fossil bivalve from the chalk; (Min.) a variety of natrolite.

radish (răd′ ish) [F. radis, from L. rādīcem, nom. -dix, see RADIX], n. A cruciferous plant, Raphanus sativus, cultivated for its root, which is eaten as a salad.

radium (rā′ di ùm) [as foll., -IUM], n. A highly radioactive metallic element resembling barium, obtained from pitchblende, discovered by Pierre and Marie Curie and G. Bémont in 1898.

radius (rā′ di ùs) [L., rod, spoke, ray], n. (pl. -dii) (Anat.) The shorter of the two long bones of the forearm; the corresponding bone in animals and birds; (Math.) the straight line from the centre of a circle or sphere to any point in the circumference; the length of this, half the diameter; a radiating line, part, object, etc., as a spoke; a circular area measured by its radius; (Bot.) the outer zone of a composite flower; a floret in this; a branch of an umbel. the radius or the four-mile radius: An area extending four miles in every direction from Charing Cross, London, beyond which cab-fares are higher. radius vector: (pl. radii vectores) (Math.) The distance from a fixed point to a curve; (Astron.) a line drawn from the centre of a heavenly body to that of a second revolving round it.

radix (rā′ diks) [L., root], n. (pl. radices, rā′ di sez) A quantity or symbol taken as the base of a system of enumeration, logarithms, etc.; a source or origin; a root.

radon (rā′ don) [RADIUM], n. A gaseous radio-active element emitted by radium.

radula (răd′ ū lă) [L., scraper, from rādere, to scrape, see RAZE], n. (Zool.) The odontophore or lingual ribbon of some molluscs.

raff (răf) [prob. from RIFF-RAFF], n. Sweepings, refuse; the rabble, the ruck, the lowest class; a person of this class, a rowdy. raff merchant, n. A dealer in lumber etc. raffish, a. Disreputable, disorderly, dissipated-looking. raffishly, adv. raffishness, n.

Raffaelesque, etc. [RAPHAELESQUE].

raffia (răf′ i ă) [Malagasy], n. A Madagascar palm with a short stem and gigantic pinnate leaves; fibre prepared from these used for tying, ornamental work, etc.

raffish [RAFF].

raffle (1) (răfl) [M.E. and F. rafle, a game with dice], n. A kind of lottery in which an article is put up to be disposed of by lot among a number of persons each subscribing a like sum. v.t. To dispose of by means of a raffle. v.i. To engage in a raffle (for).

raffle (2) (răfl) [O.F. rafle (in rifle ou rafle) prob. rel to RAFF], n. Rubbish, lumber. (Naut.) a tangle of cordage, gear, etc.

rafflesia (rā flē′ zi ă) [after Sir T. Raffles (1781–1826)], n. (Bot.) A genus of very large stemless parasitic plants from Java and Sumatra.

raft (1) (raft) [Icel. raptr (cp. Swed. raft, Dan. rafte)], n. A number of logs, planks, etc. fastened together for transport by floating; a flat floating framework of planks or other material used for supporting or carrying persons, goods, etc., esp. as a substitute for a boat in shipwreck etc.; (Am.) a floating accumulation of driftwood, ice, etc. in a river. v.t. To transport on or as on a raft; to fasten together with a raft. v.i. To travel on a raft; to work a raft. rafter (2), raftsman, n. One who manages or works on a raft.

raft (2) (raft) [var. of RAFF], n. (Am. slang) A large number, a crowd, a lot.

rafter (1) (raf′ tėr) [A.-S. ræfter, cp. RAFT (1)], n. A sloping piece of timber supporting a roof or the framework on which the tile etc. of the roof are laid. v.t. To furnish with rafters; to plough with ridges by turning a strip over on the unploughed adjoining strip, to half-plough.

rhine (3) (rīn) [formerly rine hemp, G. reinhanf, clean hemp], n. A superior quality of Russian hemp.

rhinencephalon (rī nen sef′ ȧ lon) [RHIN-, ENCEPHALON], n. (Anat.) The olfactory lobe of the brain. rhinencephalic (-făl′ ik), rhinencephalous (-sef′ ȧ lŭs), a.

rhino (1) (rī′ nō) [etym. doubtful], n. (slang) Money, coin.

rhino (2) (rī′ nō) [short for RHINOCEROS], n. A rhinoceros.

rhino- [Gr. rhis rhinos, nose], comb. form. Pertaining to the nose or nostrils. rhinobatid (rī nob′ ȧ tid) [Gr. batos, ray], n. (Ichthyol.) A shark-like ray. rhinocaul (rī′ nō kawl), n. (Anat.) The peduncle of the olfactory bulb of the brain.

rhinoceros (rī nos′ ėr ŏs) [late L., from Gr. rhinokerōs (RHINO-, kerōs, keras, horn)], n. (pl. -oses) A large pachydermatous quadruped, now found only in Africa and S. Asia, with one or two horns on the nose. rhinoceros-bird, n. The African beef-eater or ox-pecker, Buphaga Africana. rhinocerical (-ser′ i kăl), rhinoceroid, rhinocerotic (-sė rot′ ik), rhinocerotiform, a. rhinocerotoid (-ser′ ŏ toid), a. and n.

rhinolith (rī′ nō lith) [RHINO-, -LITH], n. (Path.) Nasal calculus. rhinology (rī nol′ ŏ ji), n. The branch of science dealing with the nose and nasal diseases. rhinological (-loj′ i kăl), a. rhinologist (-nol′ ŏ jist), n. rhino-pharyngeal (rī nō fȧ rin′ jė ăl), a. Pertaining to the nose and the pharynx. rhinopharyngitis (-jī′ tis), n. rhinoplasty (rī′ nō plăs ti), n. (Surg.) An operation for restoring an injured nose. rhinoplastic (-plăs′ tik), a. rhinorrhœa (rī nō rē′ ȧ), n. Discharge of blood from the nose. rhinoscope, n. (Med.) An instrument for inspecting the interior of the nose. rhinoscleroma (-sklė rō′ mȧ), n. A disease affecting the nose, lips, etc., with a tuberculous growth. rhinoscope (rī′ nō skōp), n. An instrument for examining the nasal passages. rhinoscopic (-skop′ ik), a. rhinoscopy (rī nos′ kŏ pi), n.

rhipido- [Gr. rhipis rhipidos, fan], comb. form. Having fan-like processes. rhipidoglossal (rip i dŏ glos′ ăl) [Gr. glōssa, tongue], a. Belonging to the Rhipidoglossa, a division of gasteropods having an odontophore with several median and many marginal teeth.

rhiz-, rhiza-, rhizo- [Gr. rhiza, root], comb. form. Pertaining to a root; having roots or root-like processes. rhizanth (rī′ zănth) [Gr. anthos, flower], n. (Bot.) A plant flowering or seeming to flower from the root. rhizanthous (-zăn′ thŭs), a. rhizic (rī′ zik), a. (Math.) Of or pertaining to the root of an equation. rhizocarp (rī′ zŏ karp) [Gr. karpos, fruit], n. A plant of the group Rhizocarpeæ (now Marsileaceæ). rhizocarpean (-kar′ pė ăn), a. rhizocarpic, -carpous, a. Having a perennial root but a stem that withers annually. rhizocephalan [Gr. kephalē, head], n. (Zool.) One of the Rhizocephala, a sub-order of parasitic crustaceans related to the cirripeds. rhizocephalous, a. rhizodont (rī′ zŏ dont), a. Having teeth rooted and anchylosed with the jaw (as crocodiles); n. A rhizodont reptile. rhizogen (rī′ zŏ jėn), n. (Bot.) A plant parasitic on the roots of another plant. rhizogenic (-jen′ ik), -genetic (-jė net′ ik), a. Root-producing. rhizoid (rī′ zoid), a. Root-like; n. A filiform or hair-like organ serving for attachment, in mosses etc.

rhizome (rī′ zōm), rhizoma (rī zō′ mȧ) [Gr. rhizōma, from rhizoun, to cause to take root, from rhiza, root], n. (Bot.) A prostrate, thickened, root-like stem, sending roots downwards and yearly producing aerial shoots etc. rhizomatous (-zom′ ȧ tŭs), a. rhizomorph (rī′ zŏ môrf), n. A root-like mycelial growth by which some fungi attach themselves to higher plants. rhizomorphoid, -phous (-môr′ foid, -fŭs), a.

rhizophagous (rī zof′ ȧ gŭs) [RHIZO-, Gr. phagein, to eat], a. Feeding on roots; pertaining to the Rhizophaga, a sub-order of marsupials comprising the wombat. rhizophagan, a. and n. rhizophore (rī′ zŏ fôr) [-PHORE], n. (Bot.) A root-like structure bearing the roots in species of Selaginella. rhizophorous (-zof′ ŏ rŭs), a. Root-bearing. rhizopod (rī′ zŏ pod) [Gr. pous podos, foot], n. (Zool.) An animalcule of the class Rhizopoda, the lowest division of the protozoa, comprising those with pseudopodia used for locomotion and the ingestion of food; (Bot.) the mycelium of fungi; a. Of or pertaining to the Rhizopoda. rhizopodal (-zop′ ŏ dăl), rhizopodic (-pod′ ik), rhizopodous (-zop′ ŏ dŭs), a.

rhodanic (rō dăn′ ik) [Gr. rhodon, rose, -IC], a. (Chem.) Producing a rose-red colour with ferric salts. rhodanic acid: Sulphocyanic acid. rhodanate (rō′ dȧ nāt), n. Sulphocyanate.

Rhodes Scholar (rōdz skol′ ăr) [Cecil Rhodes (1853-1902)], n. Scholarships at Oxford founded under the will of Cecil Rhodes for students from the British Dominions and Colonies, U.S.A. and Germany.

Rhodian (1) (rō′ di ăn) [L. Rhodius (L. and Gr. Rhodos, Rhodes, -IAN)], a. Pertaining to Rhodes, an island in the Ægean Sea. n. An inhabitant or native of Rhodes.

rhodian (2), rhodian-wood [RHODIUM (1)].

rhodinol (rō′ di nōl, -nol) [Gr. rhodinos, made of roses, as foll., -OL], n. (Chem.) An alcohol occurring in geranium- and rose-oil.

rhodium (1) (rō′ di ŭm) [mod. L., neut. of rhodius, rose-like, from Gr. rhodon, rose], n. The Jamaica rosewood; the hard, white, scented wood of either of two shrubby convolvuluses growing in the Canary Islands, also called rhodium- or rhodian-wood. oil of rhodium: An oil obtained from this. rhodian (2), a.

rhodium (2) (rō′ di ŭm) [Gr. rhodon, rose, -IUM], n. (Chem.) A greyish-white metallic element belonging to the platinum group. rhodic, rhodous, a.

rhodo- [Gr. rhodon, rose], comb. form. Rose-like; scented like a rose. rhodocrinite (rō dō krin′ īt), n. (Palæont.) One of a Palæozoic family of encrinites, the Rhodocrinidæ or rose-encrinites. rhodocrinid (rō dok′ ri nid), rhodocrinoid, a. and n.

rhododendron (rō dō den′ drŏn) [late L. and Gr. (RHODO-, dendron, tree)], n. A genus of evergreen shrubs akin to the azaleas, with brilliant flowers; a shrub of this genus.

rhodonite (rō′ dō nīt) [G. rhodonit (Gr. rhodon, rose, -ITE)], n. (Min.) A rose-pink silicate of manganese.

rhodophyl (rō′ dō fil) [RHODO-, Gr. phullon, leaf], n. (Bot.) The compound pigment giving red algæ their colour. rhodophyllous (-fil′ ŭs), a. rhodopsin (rō dop′ sin) [Gr. opsis, sight], n. (Physiol.) A purplish pigment found in the retina, visual purple.

Rhodora (rō dôr′ à) [Gr. rhodon, rose], n. (Bot.) A N. American flowering shrub, R. Canadensis, belonging to the family Ericaceæ, growing in boggy ground.

rhœadic (rē ăd′ ik) [Gr. rhoias -ados, a kind of poppy, -IC], a. Derived from the red poppy, Papaver rhœas. rhœadic acid: A compound found in the flowers of this, the principle of their colouring-matter. rhœadine (rē′ à din), n. An alkaloid obtained from the red poppy.

rhomb (rom, before a vowel romb) [F. rhombe, L. rhombus, Gr. rhombos], n. An oblique parallelogram, with equal sides and angles; (Cryst.) a rhombohedron. rhomb-spar, n. A perfectly crystallized variety of dolomite. rhombic, a. rhombiform, a. rhombo-, comb. form. rhombohedron (rom bō hē′ drŏn, -hed′ rŏn), n. (pl. -dra) A solid figure bounded by six equal rhombs. rhombohedral, a. rhomboid (rom′ boid), n. A parallelogram the adjoining sides of which are not equal and which contains no right angle; (Anat.) a rhomboid muscle; a. Having the shape or nearly the shape of a rhomboid. rhomboid ligament: (Anat.) A ligament connecting the first rib and the end of the clavicle. rhomboid muscle: Either of two muscles connecting the vertebral border of the scapula with the spine. rhomboidal (rom boi′ dăl), a. rhomboidally, adv. rhomboideus (rom boi′ dē ŭm), n. (pl. -dei) (Anat.) A rhomboid ligament.

rhombus, n. (pl. -bi, -bī) A rhomb; (Zool.) a genus of flat-fishes containing the turbot, brill, etc.

rhotacism (rō′ tà sizm) [Gr. rhōtakizein, to rhotacize, from rhō, the letter r, -ISM], n. Exaggerated or erroneous pronunciation of the letter r, burring; (Philol.) the change of s into r, as in Indo-European languages. rhotacize, v.i.

rhubarb (roo′ barb) [O.F. reubarbe (F. rhubarbe), med. L. rheubarbum, rheubarbarum, altered from rhabarbarum (rha barbarum, foreign Rha, the Volga)], n. Any herbaceous plant of the genus Rheum, esp. R. rhaponticum, the English, French, common, or garden rhubarb, the fleshy and juicy leaf-stalks of which are cooked when young as a substitute for fruit; the roots of several Oriental species of Rheum, usu. called East Indian, Russia, or Turkey rhubarb, from which purgative medicines are prepared. rhubarby, a.
